Your Sneak Peek at the Newest Hotels Opening in L.A.

Consider your next staycation planned

November 22, 2016 | Lanee Lee | 0 Comments

Over the next 12 months, a dozen new or remodeled hotels are opening in the city. Why now? One lofty guess: the world has finally discovered that L.A. is the best city in America, and people are flooding to the left coast to experience it. Another possible reason? An “If you build it, they will come” push to snag the 2024 Summer Olympics bid. Or maybe it’s just time for some fresh lodging (and bedding). Our stalwarts are stunning—the Beverly Wilshire, the Biltmore DTLA, the Langham Pasadena—but when the mood strikes for a staycation with a hint of surprise, there’s a whole new hotelscape to check in to. Here are five we can’t wait to try:

Shade Hotel Redondo Beach

For a city on the ocean, L.A. has very few waterfront hotels. The yacht chic-themed Shade Hotel—the brand’s second in the city—is out to change that. Book a Deluxe Suite View room that faces the marina for the best views, complete with a private outdoor soaking tub to enjoy them from. Or, save a few bucks with a standard room and catch the panoramic vistas from the rooftop pool or at Sea Level, the hotel’s Cali-coastal waterfront restaurant (don’t miss the crispy chicken starter).

Features we love: Champagne at check-in and cake pops at turn down; Free beach cruiser rentals; Tempur-Pedic beds in all the rooms

Opening: November 18, 2016

Details: 655 N Harbor Dr., Redondo Beach
